Attorneys for Plaintiff and the Proposed Class

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

ERICA FRASCO, individually and on behalf of all others similarly situated,

Plaintiff,

v.

Flo Health, Inc., a Delaware corporation.

Defendants.

Case No.: _____

CLASS ACTION COMPLAINT

JURY TRIAL DEMANDED

2 Plaintiff Erica Frasco (“Plaintiff”), on behalf of herself and all others similarly situated,
3 asserts the following against Defendant Flo Health, Inc. (“Flo Health”), based upon personal
4 knowledge, where applicable, information and belief, and the investigation of counsel.

5 SUMMARY OF ALLEGATIONS

6 1. Flo Health owns and develops the Flo Period & Ovulation Tracker (“Flo App” or 7 “App”), one of the most popular health and fitness mobile applications.

8 2. The Flo App purports to use artificial intelligence to provide advice and assistance
9 related to women’s health, such as by serving as an ovulation calendar, period tracker, pregnancy 10 guide, and wellness and lifestyle tracker.

11 3. Flo Health touts that its app is the “#1 mobile product for women’s health.” The 12 Flo App has been installed more than 165 million times and has over 38 million monthly active
13 users. The App has also been rated the #1 period tracker in the United States based on active
14 audience and as the #1 most downloaded health app in the Apple App Store.¹

15 4. In order to use the Flo App, millions of users—including Plaintiff—provide Flo
16 Health with personally identifying information (e.g., their names, email addresses, dates of birth, 17 and places of residence), along with intimate details about their sexual health, menstruation cycles,
18 gynecological health, and physical well-being through a series of “survey questions.” These 19 questions cover extremely personal topics and include, for example: (1) “do you experience any 20 pain during sex?” (2) “how often do you have sex?” (3) “how often do you masturbate?” (4) “have 21 you noticed a decrease in sexual desire?” (5) “are you sexually active during your period?” and (6)
22 “What type of relationship do you have at present?”

23 5. Users also provided intimate, personal health details in response to probing survey
24 questions about health and wellness, such as: (1) “do you smoke” (2) “how often do you
25 experience stress?” (3) “do you want to change your weight?” (4) “do you follow a particular diet?”
26 (5) “how often do you exercise?” (6) “do you get yeast infections?” (6) “do you have any chronic

27 ¹ The Flo App was also feature as the “App of the Day” in the Apple App Store in over 30 countries.
28

diseases?” and (7) “do you have any reproductive system diseases?”

6. Within the first few minutes of using the Flo App, users answer over thirty survey questions like these. As users continue to use the app, they are encouraged by Flo Health to provide more and more intimate health data, including daily information about whether they have their period, their weight, how long they slept, whether they had sex (as well as their sex drive, if sex was unprotected, or if they masturbated), their mood (ranging from “calm” to “very self-critical,”) and if they have any health symptoms (like headaches, breast tenderness, acne, or fatigue).

7. By providing this information, Flo Health claims to predict ovulation, aid in pregnancy and childbirth, and provide lifestyle and wellness suggestions, allowing users to “take full control of [their] health.”

8. Plaintiff and Class members provided this information to Flo Health based on the company’s repeated assurances that their intimate health data would remain protected and confidential and would not be disclosed to third parties.

9. Flo Health’s privacy policies and public assurances have claimed—time and time again—that Flo Health would not share users’ intimate health data with anyone. Flo Health’s website touts that “[p]rivacy in the digital age is of utmost importance. Flo provides a secure platform for millions of women globally.”²

10. Similarly, Flo Health’s privacy policy states, in all capital letters, that it “WILL NOT TRANSMIT ANY OF YOUR PERSONAL DATA TO THIRD PARTIES, EXCEPT IF IT IS REQUIRED TO PROVIDE THE SERVICE TO YOU (E.G. TECHNICAL SERVICE PROVIDERS), UNLESS WE HAVE ASKED FOR YOUR EXPLICIT CONSENT.” Flo Health assured users that these third parties would not receive “survey results,” “information regarding your marked cycles, pregnancy, symptoms, notes” or information about “which articles [users] view” i.e., users’ intimate health data. Flo Health further assured users that these third parties “will never use such information for any other purpose except to provide services in connection

1 with the App.”³

2 11. These assurances were patently false. In February 2019, a report published by the 3 Wall Street Journal revealed that, despite Flo Health’s promises that it would not share intimate
4 health data, Flo Health had spent years disclosing the intimate health data that users entered into
5 the Flo App to dozens of third parties, including major advertising companies such as Facebook,
6 Inc. (“Facebook”) and Google, LLC (“Google”), who were free to use this data for their own
7 purposes.

8 12. In response to this revelation, the Federal Trade Commission (“FTC”) launched its 9 own investigation into Flo Health’s data privacy and disclosure practices and ultimately filed a
10 complaint, charging Flo Health with making a variety of fraudulent misrepresentations to Flo App
11 users in violation of their privacy rights.

12 13. On January 13, 2021, Flo Health entered into a settlement with the FTC that 13 prohibited Flo Health from further misrepresenting the purposes for which or entities to whom it
14 discloses users’ intimate health data, as well as obtain an independent review of its privacy policy,
15 obtain user consent before sharing their data, and notify third parties that previously received
16 users’ intimate health data to destroy that information.⁴

17 14. If Plaintiff and Class members had known that Flo Health would share their 18 intimate health data, they would not have used the Flo App.

19 15. Flo Health’s data disclosure practices constitute an extreme invasion of Plaintiff
20 and Class members’ right to privacy and violates federal and state common law.

28 ⁵ Terms of Use, FLO HEALTH, INC., <https://flo.health/terms-of-service> (effective Feb. 5, 2020).

1 New Jersey and a resident of Passaic County.

2 22. Plaintiff Frasco downloaded the Flo App from the Apple app store in 2017 and has 3 been an active user ever since.

4 23. Plaintiff Frasco has provided Flo Health with her intimate health data, including
5 questions about her health and wellness, menstruation cycle, and sexual activity in response to Flo
6 Health's survey questions.

7 24. Plaintiff Frasco has continued to provide Flo Health with her intimate health data
8 while using the Flo App, including personal details about her menstruation cycle and symptoms.

9 25. Plaintiff Frasco believed that her intimate health data would stay private and that 10 Flo Health would not disclose this information to third parties, like Facebook or Google. Plaintiff
11 Frasco did not consent or provide permission for Flo Health to do so.

12 26. In direct contravention to its privacy policy and public assurances, Flo Health
13 disclosed Ms. Frasco's intimate health data without her knowledge or consent to third parties.

14 27. Plaintiff Frasco would not have used the Flo App if she had known that they would 15 share her intimate health data with third parties.

16 B. Defendant

17 28. Defendant Flo Health, Inc. is a Delaware corporation with principal executive 18 offices located at 1013 Centre Road, Suite 403-B, Wilmington, Delaware 19805.

19 FACTUAL BACKGROUND

20 I. Founding of Flo Health, Inc.

21 29. Flo Health began as a startup in 2015 owned by a group of mobile app developers
22 based in Minsk, Belarus. That same year, the company released the Flo App, the first mobile 23 application to make use of artificial intelligence to accurately predict reproductive cycles.

24 30. When first launched, the Flo App operated essentially as a calendar that allowed
25 users to track their period and ovulation. Over time, the App's developers expanded the Flo App's
26 functionality to assist with all phases of the reproductive cycle, including the start of menstruation,
27 cycle tracking, preparation for conception, pregnancy, early motherhood, and menopause. The Flo
28

1 App also expanded to provide users overall health and wellness suggestions.

2 31. As Flo App's features expanded, the App requested a wider and wider range of 3 personal information from its users, including intimate personal details like a user's history of 4 contraceptive methods, vaginal discharge, diseases, water intake, weight, pains and other physical
5 or mental symptoms, mood swings, and sexual activity (including the users' sexual desire levels,
6 whether they experience pain during sex, or did not use protection). Users can also write "personal 7 notes" to log additional information in the App.

8 32. In 2017, Flo Health further expanded Flo App's functionality to include social 9 media features alongside its services as a health product. The App's developers included a new 10 community section on the App, allowing users to anonymously ask and answer questions related 11 to women's health.

12 33. That same year, Flo Health gained international attention by working with the 13 United Nations Population Fund as part of its "Let's Talk About it. Period." campaign, which 14 aimed to increase public awareness of social and health issues related to menstruation.

15 34. Throughout this period, Flo App steadily grew more popular. By December 2020, 16 150 million users had downloaded the App. The App has been rated #1 period tracker in the 17 United States based on active audience and as the #1 most downloaded health app in the Apple
18 App Store.

19 35. Through its success, Flo Health has gathered and collected intimate health details
20 from over 100 million users, including Plaintiff. Users provided this information based on Flo
21 Health's repeated assurances that this information would remain private and that they would not 22 share users' intimate health data.

23 36. Flo Health promised that it would, under no circumstances, share users' intimate
24 health data without user consent. While Flo Health disclosed it might share "certain" information
25 with third-parties who it uses to "supply software applications, web hosting an other technologies
26 for the App," Flo Health promised this would not include "information regarding your marked
27 cycles, pregnancy, symptoms, notes and other information entered by [users]" or "survey results"
28

1 and “articles [users] view.”

2 37. However, in February 2019, the Wall Street Journal released a bombshell report
3 revealing for the first time that Flo Health shares its users’ intimate health data with third-parties,
4 like Facebook and Google, including when a user was on their period or intended to get pregnant.⁶

5 38. Further investigations have revealed that Facebook was not the only third-party to 6 which Flo Health disclosed consumers’ intimate health data. Between at least 2016 and 2019, Flo
7 Health contracted with dozens of third-party firms to provide, among other things, various
8 marketing and analytics services in connection with the Flo App. These firms included Facebook, 9 Google, and mobile analytics firms AppsFlyer Ltd. (“AppsFlyer”) and Flurry, Inc. (“Flurry”).

10 39. Despite Flo Health’s representations that third parties would not receive users’
11 survey results and “information regarding your marked cycles, pregnancy, symptoms, notes and 12 other information entered by [users],” Flo Health disclosed users’ intimate health data to third 13 parties, including some of the largest advertising companies in the country.

14 40. Further, despite Flo Health’s promise that third parties would only receive data “as 15 necessary to perform their work” and “will never use such information for any other purpose
16 except to provide services in connection with the App,” Flo Health did not contractually limit how 17 these third parties could use this data.

18 41. In fact, the terms of service governing Flo Health’s agreement with these third
19 parties allowed them to use the data for their own purposes, completely unrelated to services
20 provided in connection with the App.

21 42. Flo Health entered into these contracts to disclose users’ sensitive health data
22 without Plaintiff’s and Class members’ knowledge or consent, in violation of their privacy rights
23 and federal law.

II. Flo Health Designed its App to Facilitate the Collection of Users' Private Data

43. Flo Health designed the Flo App to request users to input intimate health and lifestyle-related information under the guise that they would receive better services. When a user creates a new account on the Flo App, the app will ask the user several question related to the timing of their menstrual cycle, the discomfort of their menstrual cycle, mood swings, preferred birth control methods, reproductive health disorders, and their level of satisfaction with their sex life and romantic relationships. Some of these questions are reflected in the example screenshots below:

44. The Flo App asks users to input over 30 responses to intimate, personal questions like these all while setting up the App for the first time, including the following:

- a. How long have you been trying to conceive?
- b. Do you have any reproductive diseases?
- c. What medication are you currently taking? How often?
- d. How often do you have sex?
- e. Do you experience any pain during sex?
- f. How often do you masturbate?
- g. Is it easy for you to orgasm?

45. The Flo App also regularly encourages users to update the App with vast quantities of additional intimate health-related information as they continue to use the App. For example, the interface of the Flo App suggests that users “[l]og your menstruation days in a handy period calendar, ovulation and fertility tracker, schedule menstrual cycle reminders, record moods and PMS symptoms, use a due date calculator, follow a pregnancy calendar” As the screenshots below demonstrate, the information collected is extremely sensitive and includes information about a user’s sexual activity, sex drive, mood, premenstrual systems, and vaginal discharge, among other things:

46. Flo Health entices users to input this information to “stay on top of [their] health,” explaining that “[l]ogging symptoms helps Flo detect possible imbalances in your body and

1 advi[s]e you to see a doctor.”

2 47. By encouraging millions of users to provide extensive information about their
3 emotional and physical health, as well as their personal lifestyles and sexual activity, to the Flo
4 App, Flo Health has collected massive volumes of deeply intimate health data about millions of 5 consumers, including Plaintiff.

6 48. Despite Flo Health’s repeated representations from 2017 to 2019 that it would
7 protect users’ intimate private information, Flo Health contracted with numerous third parties
8 granting them full access to any information obtained from Flo App users, which they could use
9 for their own purposes, including advertising and product improvement unrelated to the Flo App.

10 49. Specifically, Flo Health provided third parties with “Standard App Events” and 11 “Custom App Events” created each time users interact with the Flo App. “Standard App Events”
12 are records of routine app functions, such as launching or closing the app, while “Custom Apps
13 Events,” are records of user-app interactions unique to the app itself. For example, when a user 14 enters menstruation dates, their weight, sleep cycle, mood, physical or mental symptoms, or any 15 other information in the Flo App, the Flo App registers the user’s interaction with that feature as a
16 Custom App Event. Through these Custom App Events, every single interaction within the Flo
17 App is recorded and stored.

18 50. Flo Health receives and stores a record of all the Custom App Events that occur in 19 the Flo App across its users’ devices. Flo Health claims to make use of these records to improve 20 the Flo App’s functionality and identify which features are likely to interest new users.

21 51. Flo Health purposefully designed the Custom App Events of the Flo App to have a
22 descriptive title. For example, when a user enters the week of their pregnancy into the app’s
23 calendar, the Flo App records the Custom App Event “R_PREGNANCY_WEEK_CHOSEN.”
24 When a user selects a feature to receive menstruation reminders in the “wanting to get pregnant
25 branch” of the app, the Flo App records the Custom App Event
26 “P_ACCEPT_PUSHES_PERIOD.”

27 52. As early as 2016, Flo Health integrated software development tools, known as 28

1 “software development kits” (“SDKs”) into the Flo App. These SDKs were provided by third-
 2 party marketing and analytics firms, such as Facebook, Google, Flurry and AppsFlyer, and
 3 allowed these firms to review information that users put into the Flo App through Custom App
 4 Events.

5 53. As a consequence of the way that Flo Health titles the Custom App Events of the 6 Flo App, the Custom App Events convey intimate details about a users’ health, including their 7 menstruations, fertility, or pregnancies. Thus, a Flo Health developer or third party reviewing a
 8 record of a user’s Custom App Events learns intimate health information about that user, including 9 their reproductive cycle and family planning decisions.

10 54. By including intimate health information in the title of the Custom App Events, Flo
 11 Health disclosed user’s intimate health information to third parties. This directly contradicts Flo
 12 Health’s statements in its privacy policies that it would not disclose this information.

13 55. Despite assurances made to consumers, the company spent years disclosing the 14 intimate health information of millions of users in the form of Custom App Events. For example, 15 Flo Health disclosed Custom App Event information to:

- 16 a. Facebook from at least June 2016 to February 2019;
- 17 b. Flurry from at least June 2016 to February 2019;
- 18 c. Google’s subsidiary Fabric from at least November 2016 to February 2019;
- 19 d. AppsFlyer from at least May 2018 to February 2019; and
- 20 e. Google from at least September 2018 to February 2019.

21 III. Flo Health’s Failure to Obtain User Consent

22 56. Between 2017 and 2019, Flo Health made repeated representations to Flo App
 23 users, promising that it would keep intimate health data they entered into the App private, and that
 24 Flo Health would only use Flo App users’ data in order to provide and improve Flo App’s 25 services.

26 57. Based on Flo Health’s representations and the guarantees made in the company’s
 27

1 Privacy Policy, millions of users entrusted Flo Health with intimate information regarding their
2 physical and mental health, romantic relationships, sex life, and lifestyle preferences.

3 58. Flo Health's privacy policy assures customers that "[w]hen you use Flo, you are 4 trusting us with intimate personal information. We are committed to keeping that trust, which is
5 why our policy as a company is to take every step to ensure that individual user's data and privacy
6 rights are protected" ⁷

7 59. More specifically, the Flo Health privacy policy, effective between August 28,
8 2017 and February 19, 2019, stated that Flo Health "may share certain" personal data with third 9 parties, but only "information that is reasonably necessary to perform their work" which involves 10 "supply[ing] software applications, web hosting, and other technologies for the App." ⁸

11 60. The same Flo Health privacy policy stated that any information shared with third 12 parties "exclud[ed] information regarding your marked cycles, pregnancy, symptoms, notes 13 and other information that is entered by you and that you do not elect to share." (emphasis 14 added). ⁹

15 61. The same Flo Health privacy policy stated that third parties could not use Flo App 16 users' personal information "for any other purpose except to provide services in connection with 17 the App." ¹⁰

18 62. Furthermore, later versions of the Flo Health privacy policy, effective between May 19 25, 2018 and February 19, 2019, specifically stated that Flo Health would not disclose "any data
20 related to health" to either of the mobile analytics firms AppsFlyer or Flurry. ¹¹

21 a. "AppsFlyer is a mobile marketing platform. We may share certain non-22 identifiable information about you and some Personal Data (but never any

b. “We may share certain non-identifiable information about you and some Personal Data (but never any data related to health) with Flurry.”

63. Consistent with the assurances made in the Flo Health privacy policy, new users of the Flo App receive a notification, informing them that personal data disclosed to AppsFlyer is “strictly limited” to technical identifiers, age groups, subscription status, and data indicating that the App has been opened by the user.

64. Flo Health’s privacy policy made similar assurances regarding Facebook, Google,

1 and Google's subsidiary Fabric. The privacy policy stated that these third parties would only 2 receive "non-personally identifiable information," "[p]ersonal Data like device identifiers," or 3 "device identifiers." The Privacy Policy did not indicate that these third parties would receive
 4 access to any record of the Custom App Events (containing intimate health data) registered by the 5 Flo App.¹²

6 65. Specifically, the Flo Privacy Policy stated as follows:

7 a. "We use Facebook Analytics and Google Analytics tools to track installs of 8 our App. Normally, Facebook and Google collect only non-personally
 9 identifiable information, though some Personal Data like device identifiers may be transferred to Facebook" (emphasis added).

10 b. "Fabric may use device identifiers that are stored on your mobile device
 11 and allow us to analyze your use of the App in order to improve our app 12 feature [sic]." (emphasis added).

13 66. By disclosing Custom App Events that users generated through interacting with the 14 Flo App, Flo Health consistently violated these terms of its Privacy Policy. As explained above,
 15 Custom App Events include explicit, intimate health data related to a user's reproductive cycles,
 16 fertility, and other health-related information. When Flo Health shared access to Custom App
 17 Events with third parties, Flo Health disclosed intimate "data related to health."

18 67. Flo Health further violated the guarantees made in its Privacy Policy by agreeing to 19 contractual terms that directly contradicted its Privacy Policy. When entering into contracts with 20 numerous third parties, Flo Health agreed to boilerplate terms of service which permitted the third
 21 party to use any information obtained from Flo App users for the third party's own purposes,
 22 including purposes explicitly excluded by the Flo Privacy Policy, such as advertising and 23 marketing:

24 a. Facebook's Business Tools Terms stated: "We use [aggregated] Event Data 25 to personalize the features and content (including ads and 26 recommendations) we show people on and off our Facebook Company

b. Google Analytics’s Terms of Service stated: “Google and its wholly owned subsidiaries may retain and use ... information collected in [Flo Health’s] use of the service.”

c. AppsFlyer’s Terms of Use stated: “You hereby allow AppsFlyer to collect, store, use and process Customer Data,” where “Customer Data” was defined to include “data concerning the characteristics and activities” of app users.

d. The Fabric Software and Services Agreement stated: “[Flo Health] acknowledges and agrees that Google [Fabric] may use Usage Data for its own business purposes,” where “Usage Data” was defined to mean “all information, data and other content, not including any [identifying data], received by Google related to [Flo Health]’s use of the Fabric Technology.”¹³

68. As a result, at least one of these third parties, Facebook, used Flo App Custom Event data for its own research and development purposes.

69. Following publication of the Wall Street Journal report exposing Flo Health’s privacy violations, Flo Health received several hundred complaints from Flo App users about the unauthorized disclosures of health information to Facebook. For example, users stated:

a. “I’m absolutely [sic] disgusted at this invasion of my most personal information.”

b. “This is private personal data and I feel disgusted that you are now making this data available to third parties.”

c. “Why would you EVER think it is ok to share that personal, private information with a third [sic] party?”

70. Alice Berg, a 25-year old student, told the Wall Street Journal “I think it’s incredibly dishonest of them that they’re just lying to their users especially when it comes to something so sensitive.”¹⁴

71. Additionally, following the Wall Street Journal publication over 100 Flo App users asked Flo Health to delete their accounts and/or data or told Flo Health they were deleting, or would be deleting, the Flo App.

IV. Plaintiff and Class Members Have a Reasonable Expectation of Privacy

72. Plaintiff and Class members have a reasonable expectation of privacy in their intimate health data, which Defendants collected, stored, and disclosed to third parties.

73. A number of studies examining the collection and disclosure of consumers' intimate personal data confirms that the disclosure of intimate personal data from millions of individuals, as Flo Health has done here, violates expectations of privacy that have been established as general social norms.

74. Privacy polls and studies uniformly show that the overwhelming majority of Americans consider one of the most important privacy rights to be the need for an individual's affirmative consent before a company collects and shares its customers' personal data.

75. For example, a recent study by Consumer Reports shows that 92% of Americans believe that internet companies and websites should be required to obtain consent before selling or sharing their data and the same percentage believe internet companies and websites should be required to provide consumers with a complete list of the data that has been collected about them.¹⁵ Moreover, according to a study by Pew Research, a majority of Americans, approximately 79%, are concerned about how data is collected about them by companies.¹⁶

76. Flo Health purported to act consistently with consumer expectations by promising not to share their intimate health data with third parties and by promising that the limited data that they did share would only be used to provide the Flo App's services.

77. Despite these assurances, Flo Health disclosed users' intimate health data to third parties without their consent, allowing these companies to use this information for any purpose. This constitutes a violation of Plaintiff's and Class members' privacy interests, as demonstrated by the outrage users conveyed when they learned that their intimate health data was disclosed by Flo Health to third parties. For example, as one user stated: "Why would you EVER think it is ok to share that personal, private information with a third [sic] party?"

78. Alice Berg, a 25-year old student, told the Wall Street Journal "I think it's incredibly dishonest of them that they're just lying to their users especially when it comes to something so sensitive."¹⁷

79. Further, at the time of the Wall Street Journals' reporting, at least 100 Flo App users had indicated to the newspaper that they had asked Flo Health to delete their accounts and/or data or told Flo Health they were deleting, or would be deleting, the Flo App.

V. The FTC has Filed Suit and Entered into a Settlement Based on Flo Health's Privacy Violations

80. In response to the Wall Street Journal's February 2019 article revealing Flo Health's invasive data sharing practices, the Federal Trade Commission ("FTC") launched an investigation into Flo Health's potential violation of state, federal and international privacy laws.

81. In January 2020, the FTC filed issued a complaint against Flo Health. The FTC stated that its investigation revealed that Flo Health disclosed the intimate health information of millions of Flo App users to third parties, such as Facebook, Google, Fabric, AppsFlyer and Flurry.

82. The FTC's investigation further determined that Flo Health conveyed intimate health data in the form of Custom App Events to third parties between at least 2016 and 2019.

83. Based on the findings of its investigation, the FTC determined that Flo Health had violated the privacy of Flo App users in several ways, including by: violating its privacy policy by ¹⁷ Sam Schechner and Mark Secada, You Give Apps Sensitive Personal Information. Then They Tell Facebook, WALL STREET JOURNAL, (Feb. 22, 2019 11:07 AM), <https://www.wsj.com/articles/you-give-apps-sensitive-personal-information-then-they-tell-facebook-11550851636>.

1 disclosing its users health information to third parties; violating its privacy policy by disclosing
2 information beyond non-personally identifiable information, device identifiers, or personal data to
3 third parties; and violating its privacy policy by failing to limit third-party use of its users personal 4 information, among other claims.

5 84. Flo Health entered into a settlement with the FTC over its alleged privacy
6 violations on January 13, 2021.

7 85. The proposed settlement (currently subject to public comment) would require Flo
8 Health to obtain an independent review of its privacy practices and obtain the consent of app users
9 before making further disclosures of their health information.

10 86. The proposed settlement would also prohibit Flo Health from further 11 misrepresenting the purposes for which it or entities to whom it discloses data collect, maintain,
12 use, or disclose the data; how much consumers can control these data uses; its compliance with 13 any privacy, security, or compliance program; and how it collects, maintains, uses, discloses, 14 deletes, or protects users' personal information.

15 TOLLING, CONCEALMENT AND ESTOPPEL

16 87. The applicable statutes of limitation have been tolled as a result of Flo Health's 17 knowing and active concealment and denial of the facts alleged herein, namely its practice of 18 disclosing intimate health data to third parties without user consent.

19 88. Among other things, Flo Health made misrepresentations and omissions both 20 publicly and in its privacy policy regarding its data sharing practices. Flo Health intentionally
21 concealed the nature and extent of its actions and intentions. To the extent the Flo App made
22 statements regarding Flo Health's service or its privacy policies, Flo Health either approved those 23 statements or failed to timely correct them in service of their ongoing scheme to conceal the true
24 nature of their conduct.

25 89. Plaintiff and Class Members could not, with due diligence, have discovered the full 26 scope of Flo Health's conduct, due in no small part to Flo Health's deliberate efforts to conceal it.
27 All applicable statutes of limitation also have been tolled by operation of the discovery rule. Under the circumstances, Flo Health was under a duty to disclose the nature and significance of their data and privacy policies and practices, but did not do so. Flo Health therefore is estopped from relying on any statute of limitations.
28

90. Flo Health's fraudulent concealment and omissions are common to Plaintiff and all Class members.

CLASS ACTION ALLEGATIONS

91. Plaintiff brings this action pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23 individually and on behalf of the following Class:

Nationwide Class: All natural persons in the United States who used the Flo App between June 2016 through present.¹⁸

92. Excluded from each Class are: (1) any Judge or Magistrate presiding over this action and any members of their families; (2) the Defendant, Defendant's subsidiaries, parents, successors, predecessors, and any entity in which the Defendant or its parent has a controlling interest and their current or former employees, officers, and directors; and (3) Plaintiff's counsel and Defendants' counsel.

93. Numerosity: The exact number of members of the Class is unknown and unavailable to Plaintiff at this time, but individual joinder in this case is impracticable. The Class likely consists of millions of individuals, and the members can be identified through Defendant's records.

94. Predominant Common Questions: The Class' claims present common questions of law and fact, and those questions predominate over any questions that may affect individual Class members. Common questions for the Class include, but are not limited to, the following:

- a. Whether Defendant violated Plaintiff's and Class members' privacy rights;
- b. Whether Defendant's acts and practices complained of herein would be highly offensive to a reasonable person;

¹⁸ Plaintiff has defined the Class based on currently available information and hereby reserves the right to amend the definition of the Class, including, without limitation, the Class Period.

- c. Whether Defendant's acts and practices amount to a breach of contract;
- d. Whether Defendant's acts and practices amount to a breach of implied contract;
- e. Whether Defendant was unjustly enriched;
- f. Whether Defendant violated the Stored Communications Act, 18 U.S.C. § 2701, et seq.;
- g. Whether Plaintiff and the Class members are entitled to equitable relief, including but not limited to, injunctive relief, restitution, and disgorgement; and,
- h. Whether Plaintiff and the Class members are entitled to actual, statutory, punitive or other forms of damages, and other monetary relief.

95. Typicality: Plaintiff's claims are typical of the claims of the other members of the Class. The claims of Plaintiff and the members of the Class arise from the same conduct by Defendants and are based on the same legal theories.

96. Adequate Representation: Plaintiff has and will continue to fairly and adequately represent and protect the interests of the Class. Plaintiff has retained counsel competent and experienced in complex litigation and class actions, including litigations to remedy privacy violations. Plaintiff have no interest that is antagonistic to those of the Class, and Defendant has no defenses unique to any Plaintiff. Plaintiff and her counsel are committed to vigorously prosecuting this action on behalf of the members of the Class, and they have the resources to do so. Neither Plaintiff nor her counsel have any interest adverse to those of the other members of the Class.

97. Substantial Benefits: This class action is appropriate for certification because class proceedings are superior to other available methods for the fair and efficient adjudication of this controversy and joinder of all members of the Class is impracticable. This proposed class action presents fewer management difficulties than individual litigation, and provides the benefits of single adjudication, economies of scale, and comprehensive supervision by a single court. Class treatment will create economies of time, effort, and expense and promote uniform decision-making.

98. Plaintiff reserves the right to revise the foregoing class allegations and definitions

1 based on facts learned and legal developments following additional investigation, discovery, or 2 otherwise.

3 CALIFORNIA LAW APPLIES TO THE ENTIRE CLASS

4 99. California substantive laws apply to every member of the Class, regardless of 5 where in the United States the Class members reside. Flo Health’s Terms of Use states “These 6 Terms of Use (this ‘Agreement’) is a legal agreement between [users] and Flo Health, Inc.”

7 100. This agreement states that “[a]ny dispute arising from this Agreement shall be
 8 governed by the laws of the State of California without regard to its conflict of law provisions.
 9 Sole and exclusive jurisdiction for any action or proceeding arising out of or related to this
 10 agreement shall be in an appropriate state or federal court located in San Francisco County, State
 11 of California”¹⁹

12 101. By choosing California law for the resolution of disputes in the agreement, Flo
 13 Health concedes that it is appropriate for this Court to apply California law to the instant dispute.
 14 Further, California’s substantive laws may be constitutionally applied to the claims of Plaintiff and 15 the Class under the Due Process Clause, 14th Amend. § 1, and the Full Faith and Credit Clause,
 16 Art. IV. § 1 of the U.S. Constitution. California has significant contact, or significant aggregation
 17 of contacts, to the claims asserted by Plaintiff and Class members, thereby creating state interests
 18 to ensure that the choice of California state law is not arbitrary or unfair.

19 102. Flo Health maintains a California postal address at 541 Jefferson Ave, Suite 100,
 20 Redwood City, CA 94063-1700 and conducts substantial business in California, such that
 21 California has an interest in regulating Defendant’s conduct under its laws. Defendant’s decision
 22 to reside in California and avail itself of California’s laws, renders the application of California
 23 law to the claims herein constitutionally permissible.

24 103. The application of California laws to the Class is also appropriate under 25 California’s choice of law rules because California has significant contacts to the claims of 26 Plaintiff and the proposed Class, and California has a greater interest in applying its laws here than any other interested state.

CLAIMS FOR RELIEF

FIRST CLAIM FOR RELIEF

Common Law Invasion of Privacy – Intrusion Upon Seclusion (On Behalf of Plaintiff and the Class)

104. Plaintiff re-alleges and incorporates the preceding allegations of this Complaint with the same force and effect as if fully restated herein.

105. Plaintiff asserting claims for intrusion upon seclusion must plead (1) that the defendant intentionally intruded into a place, conversation, or matter as to which plaintiff had a reasonable expectation of privacy; and (2) that the intrusion was highly offensive to a reasonable person.

106. Flo Health's disclosure of Plaintiff's and Class members' intimate health data, including information concerning physical and emotional health, family planning, and romantic lifestyle, as well as their interests in making intimate personal decisions or conducting personal activities, constitutes an intentional intrusion upon Plaintiff's and Class members' solitude or seclusion in that Flo Health shared these intimate personal details that were intended to stay private with third parties without users consent, and despite Flo Health's express promises that it would not do so.

107. Plaintiff and Class members had a reasonable expectation of privacy in their intimate health data. Plaintiff and Class members did not consent to, authorize, or know about Flo Health's intrusion at the time it occurred. Plaintiff and Class members never agreed that Flo Health could disclose their intimate health data.

108. Flo Health's intentional intrusion on Plaintiff's and Class members' solitude or seclusion without consent would be highly offensive to a reasonable person. Plaintiff and Class members reasonably expected, based on Flo Health's repeated assurances, that their intimate health data would not be disclosed. Defendant's conduct is especially egregious as it failed to contractually restrict what third parties do with Plaintiff's and Class members' intimate health data

1 once it is disclosed.

2 109. Given the extremely intimate nature of the data Flo Health collected and disclosed,
3 such as private details about users' sexual activity, menstrual cycles, and physical and mental
4 health, this kind of intrusion would be (and in fact is) highly offensive to a reasonable person.

5 110. The highly offensive nature of Flo Health's intentional intrusion into Plaintiff's and 6 Class members' personal affairs is confirmed by its FTC settlement and the public outrage and 7 hundreds of complaints received by Flo Health after its data sharing practices were disclosed,
8 instructing Flo Health to delete their data or their account or that they would be deleting their 9 account.

10 111. Users have expressed extreme outrage in response to Flo Health's data sharing 11 practices:

- 12 a. "I'm absolutely [sic] disgusted at this invasion of my most personal information."
- 13 b. "This is private personal data and I feel disgusted that you are now making 14 this data available to third parties."
- 15 c. "Why would you EVER think it is ok to share that personal, private 16 information with a third [sic] party?"

17 112. Alice Berg, a 25-year old student, told the Wall Street Journal "I think it's 18 incredibly dishonest of them that they're just lying to their users especially when it comes to 19 something so sensitive."²⁰

20 113. The disclosure of intimate health data from millions of individuals without consent 21 is also highly offensive because it violates expectations of privacy that have been established by 22 general social norms. Privacy polls and studies consistently show that the overwhelming majority
23 of Americans believe one of the most important privacy rights is the need for an individual's 24 affirmative consent before personal data, like intimate health data, is harvested or shared.

25 114. As a result of Defendant's actions, Plaintiff and Class members have suffered harm

28

1 and injury, including but not limited to an invasion of their privacy rights.

2 115. Plaintiff and Class members have been damaged as a direct and proximate result of 3 Defendant's invasion of their privacy and are entitled to just compensation, including monetary
4 damages.

5 116. Plaintiff and Class members seek appropriate relief for that injury, including but
6 not limited to damages that will reasonably compensate Plaintiff and Class members for the harm
7 to their privacy interests as well as a disgorgement of profits made by Flo Health as a result of its 8 intrusions upon Plaintiff's and Class members' privacy.

9 117. Plaintiff and Class members are also entitled to punitive damages resulting from 10 the malicious, willful and intentional nature of Defendant's actions, directed at injuring Plaintiff
11 and Class members in conscious disregard of their rights. Such damages are needed to deter
12 Defendant from engaging in such conduct in the future.

13 118. Plaintiff also seeks such other relief as the Court may deem just and proper.

14 SECOND CLAIM FOR RELIEF
15 Breach of Contract
16 (On Behalf of Plaintiff and the Class)

17 119. Plaintiff re-alleges and incorporates the preceding allegations of this Complaint
18 with the same force and effect as if fully restated herein.

19 120. Plaintiff entered into a contract with Defendant by downloading and using the Flo
20 App. In connection with using the Flo App, both parties agree to abide by Flo Health's Terms of 21 Use ("TOU"). Plaintiff has fully complied with her obligations under the TOU with regard to her 22 use of Flo Health's product and services.

23 121. The TOU states that "[b]y creating an account or accessing or using the App, you 24 acknowledge that you accept and agree to be bound by the terms of this Agreement." Plaintiff and 25 Defendant are subject to Flo Health's Privacy Policy, which is incorporated into the TOU.²¹

26 122. Flo Health's Privacy Policy states that it only provides users' personal data to third

27 ²¹ Terms of Use, FLO HEALTH, INC., <https://flo.health/terms-of-service> (effective Feb. 5, 2020).

1 parties when that data “is reasonably necessary to perform their work,” which may include
2 “suppl[ying] software applications, web hosting, and other technologies for the App.” Flo Health
3 breached the contract because it did not disclose this information to “provide services in 4 connection with the App.” Flo Health allowed third parties to use this information for any 5 purposes, including for their own benefit like research, development, and targeted advertising that 6 was unrelated to the stated purpose disclosed by the Privacy Policy.

7 123. Flo Health’s Privacy Policy stated that any information shared with third parties
8 “exclud[ed] information regarding your marked cycles, pregnancy, symptoms, notes and other 9 information that is entered by you and that you do not elect to share.” Flo Health breached the 10 contract because it disclosed users’ intimate health data regarding marked cycles, fertility cycles,
11 pregnancy and other health information in the form of Custom App Events to third parties.

12 124. Flo Health’s Privacy Policy stated that Flo Health would not disclose “any data
13 related to health” to either of the mobile analytics firms AppsFlyer or Flurry. Flo Health breached
14 the contract because it disclosed to AppsFlyer and Flurry Custom App Events which contained 15 intimate health data.

16 125. Flo Health’s Privacy Policy stated that Flo Health would only provide “non-
17 personally identifiable information,” “Personal Data like device identifiers,” or “device
18 identifiers” to Facebook, Google, and Fabric. Flo Health breached the contract because it provided
19 Facebook, Google and Fabric access to Custom App Events which conveyed identifiable
20 information and intimate health data, unlike device identifiers.

21 126. By disclosing Plaintiff’s and Class members’ intimate health data to third parties
22 without their consent, Flo Health has breached material terms of the contract.

23 127. As a result of Flo Health’s breach of contract, Plaintiff and Class members have 24 suffered damages in an amount to be determined at trial. In addition, or in the alternative, Plaintiff
25 and Class members seek damages that will reasonably compensate Plaintiff and Class members
26 for the harm to their privacy interest. By sharing their intimate health data with third parties
27 without consent, Flo Health invaded Plaintiff’s and Class members privacy interests. As a result of 28

1 Flo Health's breach of the TOU and Privacy Policy, Plaintiff and Class members have suffered
2 damages.

3 THIRD CLAIM FOR RELIEF
4 Breach of Implied Contract
5 (On Behalf of Plaintiff and the Class)
6 (In the Alternative)

7 128. Plaintiff incorporates by reference and re-alleges the preceding allegations, as 8 though fully set forth herein.

9 129. Plaintiff alleges this claim in the alternative to her Second Claim for Relief.

10 130. Plaintiff entered into an implied contract with Defendant by downloading and using 11 the Flo App. In connection with using the Flo App, both parties agree to abide by Flo Health's 12 Terms of Use ("TOU"). Plaintiff has fully complied with her obligations under the TOU with 13 regard to her use of Flo Health's product and services.

14 131. Defendant solicited and invited prospective customers such as Plaintiff and Class
15 members to use the Flo App with claims that they care about Plaintiff and Class members privacy 16 rights.

17 132. Defendant's offer included specific assurances from Flo Health's privacy policy, 18 including that Flo Health would only share "certain" personal data with third parties, limited to 19 only the "information that is necessary to perform their work" in support of the Flo App.

20 133. Plaintiff and Class members accepted Defendant's offers by downloading the Flo
21 App and entering intimate health data into the Flo App because of these promises.

22 134. In entering into such implied contracts, Plaintiff and Class members reasonably
23 believed that Defendant would comply with relevant laws and regulations, including privacy laws, 24 as well as their own assurances.

25 135. Plaintiff and Class members reasonably believed that Defendant would not disclose
26 intimate information regarding their fertility cycles, lifestyle choices, and romantic relationships
27 with third parties, as stated in its privacy policy.
28

136. Defendant's implied promise not to disclose Plaintiff's and Class members sensitive personal information to third parties is evidenced by, e.g., the representations in Flo Health's terms of use and privacy policy set forth above.

137. Plaintiff and Class members would not have downloaded or made use of the Flo App in the absence of such promises.

138. Plaintiff and Class members fully performed their obligations under the implied contracts with Defendants by abstaining from making any "forbidden use" of the Flo App, as dictated by the Flo Health terms of service.²²

139. Defendant breached its implied contract with Plaintiff and Class members by secretly collecting and disclosing sensitive personal data for Defendant's own benefit, in violation of the terms of use and privacy policy.

140. By disclosing Plaintiff's and Class members' intimate health data to third parties without their consent, Flo Health has breached material terms of the implied contract.

141. As a result of Flo Health's breach of implied contract, Plaintiff and Class members have suffered damages in an amount to be determined at trial. In addition, or in the alternative, Plaintiff and Class members seek damages that will reasonably compensate Plaintiff and Class members for the harm to their privacy interest. By sharing their intimate health data with third parties without consent, Flo Health invaded Plaintiff's and Class members privacy interests. As a result of Flo Health's breach of the TOU and Privacy Policy, Plaintiff and Class members have suffered damages.

FOURTH CLAIM FOR RELIEF
Unjust Enrichment
(On Behalf of Plaintiff and the Class)
(In the Alternative)

142. Plaintiff re-alleges and incorporates the preceding allegations of this Complaint with the same force and effect as if fully restated herein.

143. Plaintiff alleges this claim in the alternative to her Second Claim for Relief.

²² Terms of Use, FLO HEALTH, INC., <https://flo.health/terms-of-service> (effective Feb. 5, 2020).

144. Plaintiff and Class members conferred a benefit upon Flo Health in the form of sensitive personal data that Defendant collected from Plaintiff and Class members, without authorization and proper compensation. Defendant has collected, disclosed, and otherwise misused this information for its own gain, providing Defendant with economic, intangible, and other benefits, including substantial monetary compensation from third parties who received Plaintiff and Class members' sensitive personal data.

145. Defendant unjustly retained those benefits at the expense of Plaintiff and Class members because Defendant's conduct damaged Plaintiff and Class members, all without providing any commensurate compensation to Plaintiff and Class members.

146. The benefits that Defendant derived from Plaintiff and Class members rightly belong to Plaintiff and Class members. It would be inequitable under unjust enrichment principles in California and every other state for Defendant to be permitted to retain any of the profit or other benefits it derived from the unfair and unconscionable methods, acts, and trade practices alleged in this Complaint.

147. Defendant should be compelled to disgorge in a common fund for the benefit of Plaintiff and Class members all unlawful or inequitable proceeds it received, and such other relief as the Court may deem just and proper.

FIFTH CLAIM FOR RELIEF
Stored Communications Act ("SCA")
18 U.S.C. § 2702, et seq.
(On Behalf of Plaintiff and the Class)

148. Plaintiff re-alleges and incorporates the preceding allegations of this Complaint with the same force and effect as if fully restated herein.

149. The SCA provides that a person "providing an electronic communication service to the public shall not knowingly divulge to any person or entity the contents of a communication while in electronic storage by that service[.]" 18 U.S.C. § 2702(a)(1).

150. "Electronic communication" is broadly defined as "any transfer of signs, signals, writing, images, sounds, data, or intelligence of any nature transmitted in whole or in part by a

1 wire, radio, electromagnetic, photoelectronic or photooptical system that affects interstate or 2 foreign commerce[.]” 18 U.S.C. § 2510(12).

3 151. “Electronic storage” is defined as “any temporary, intermediate storage of a wire or 4 electronic communication incidental to the electronic transmission thereof; and any storage of 5 such communication by an electronic communication service for purposes of backup protection of 6 such communication[.]” 18 U.S.C. § 2510(17)(A)-(B).

7 152. “Electronic communication service” is defined as “any service which provides to 8 users thereof the ability to send or receive wire or electronic communications[.]” 18 U.S.C. § 9 2510(15).

10 153. “Person” is defined as “any employee, or agent of the United States or any State or 11 political subdivision thereof, and any individual, partnership, association, joint stock company, 12 trust, or corporation.” 18 U.S.C. § 2510(6).

13 154. Flo Health, as a corporation, is a person as defined under 18 U.S.C. § 2510(6).

14 155. Flo Health provides a service that allows Plaintiff and Class members to send and 15 receive electronic communications from Flo Health, fellow app users, and medical experts. Flo
16 Health provides this service “to the public” because Flo Health makes its Flo App freely available
17 to millions of individuals, including Plaintiff and Class members.

18 156. Plaintiff and Class members reasonably expected that Defendant’s service did not 19 include disclosing their “electronic communications,” i.e., their data (as broadly defined), based, in 20 part, on Defendants’ failure to provide any disclosures or obtain consent for permission to do so,
21 as well as Flo Health’s affirmative misrepresentations that it would not disclose this information.

22 157. Defendant stores Plaintiff’s and Class members’ electronic communications on 23 external servers and intentionally divulged them by disclosing this information to third parties, in 24 reckless disregard for Plaintiff’s and Class members’ privacy rights for Defendant’s own financial 25 benefit.

26 158. Defendant’s actions were at all relevant times intentional, willful, and knowing, as 27 evidenced by the fact that this was Defendant’s routine business practice and it purposefully failed
28

1 to disclose this practice to consumers.

2 159. As a result of Defendant's violations of the SCA, Plaintiff and Class members have
3 suffered harm and injury, including but not limited to the invasion of their privacy rights.

4 160. Pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 2707, Plaintiff and Class members are entitled to: (1)
5 appropriate equitable or declaratory relief; (2) damages, in an amount to be determined at trial,
6 assessed as the sum of the actual damages suffered by Plaintiff and the Class and any profits made
7 by Defendant as a result of the violation, but in no case less than the minimum statutory damages
8 of $1,000 per person; and (3) reasonable attorneys' fees and other litigation costs reasonably 9 incurred.

10 SIXTH CLAIM FOR RELIEF
11 California Confidentiality of Medical Information Act ("CMIA")
12 Civil Code Section 56.06
13 (On Behalf of Plaintiff and the Class)

14 161. Plaintiff re-alleges and incorporates the preceding allegations of this Complaint
15 with the same force and effect as if fully restated herein.

16 162. Defendant is deemed a provider of health care under Civil Code Section 56.06, 17 subdivision (b), because it offers software to consumers that is designed to maintain medical 18 information for the purposes of allowing its users to manage their information or for the diagnosis,
19 treatment, or management of a medical condition.

165. Defendant also negligently disclosed medical information in violation of Civil Code section 56.36 subdivisions (b) and (c) through the unauthorized disclosure of Plaintiff's and Class members' intimate health data.

168.
